PCA Skin and DeSenze Dentistry

Dentistry and skin care have a direct link to each another, and now I understand the connection. "A dentist is well trained in head and neck anatomy as well as full body pathology; we really have the ability not only to treat disease, but also to identify skin imperfections and can supply medically based products to correct them if our patients desire." Increasing my knowledge of skin care, I am directly able to increase my expertise in oral cancer screenings. "I feel I am better able to notice the smaller things on a patient's face, and as we all know, many times cancer can be detected first in the mouth before any other signs or symptoms are present systemically. I can offer medical guidance and skin care product selection without always needing to give the patient a prescription drug or refer him or her to a dermatologist."
